St. Thomas' most recent title came courtesy of 172.5 points to win the 2014 title, with St. Olaf finishing a close second on hits home track a year ago with 159 points. The two also had a great duel at the 2015 MIAC Indoor Championships in March, with St. Thomas pulling away late for a 162-142 win over the Oles.

At the 2014 outdoor meet, Hamline scored 110 points to edge Saint John's (108) in an entertaining battle for third place. Gustavus was fifth with 66.5 points, just ahead of Bethel, which took sixth with 62 points. Carleton (57) held a five-point edge on Concordia (52) for seventh, and Augsburg (41.5), Macalester (28.5) and Saint Mary's (1) rounded out the rest of the standings.

The 2015 championships will have a familiar feel with 10 returning individual event champions back to try to defend their titles. St. Thomas has Brian Jarvey chasing this third-straight title in the 400-meter dash and Matt Schauer back in the shot put after winning those events last season, and St. Olaf will have a trio of returning winners back in the field. Grant will try for his third-straight title in the 5,000-meter run and teammates Phillip Meyer (10,000-meter run) and Jake Brown (3,000-meter steeplechase) will each try for two in a row in their respective events.

Saint John's Thomas Feichtinger will try for a third-straight championship in the 800-meter run. There are also a pair of MIAC champion jumpers back in the mix, with Logan Hovie gunning for a third-straight high jump title and Augsburg's Barinedum Kordah trying to capture the long jump title for the second season in a row.

Beyond those returning champs, each team has athletes back with high hopes for success this weekend. Augsburg sprinter Undre Smith-Brewer and rookie pole vaulter Deontae Heuer both have high hopes for the Auggies. Bethel will be led by thrower Bryce DeBoer and sprinter Elisha Hinton. Carleton has a strong group of experienced runners led by Colby Seyferth and Hart Hornor.

In addition to star sprinter Larson Hamline has strength in the field events with pole vaulter Mark Volker and thrower Chase Duwenhoegger. Host school Macalester is excited with Hovie back in the high jump and seniors Joe Giamberdino (distance) and Konnor Fleming (javelin).

In addition to Feichtinger, Saint John's is excited about a pair of sophomore jumpers, Joe Koll and Raymond Twumasi.
